

Your Pet Needs Dental Care Too!

For most of us, caring for our teeth and gums has been a part of our daily routine for as long as we can remember. Just like you, your pet needs dental care too. All pets are at risk for developing dental problems.

DENTAL DISEASE IS THE MOST COMMON HEALTH PROBLEM IN BOTH DOGS AND CATS.

Poor oral health can also contribute to problems elsewhere in the body such as the heart and kidneys, compromising the health of you pet.

$40.00
OFF

Exp. 2/26/10

Signs of Dental or Periodontal Disease

- Bad breath (one of the first signs)
- Yellowing of the teeth or a brownish crust on the teeth
- Reddening of the gum tissue or swollen gums
- Bleeding gums (even when chewing on hard toys).
- Decreased appetite or going to the food bowl but not eating
- Change of chewing habits or swallowing food whole
- Dropping food out of the mouth
- Drooling
- Loose or missing teeth

Preventive Oral Health Care

Regular dental health exams should be done along with your pet's annual exam. Most pets after the age of three, need to have annual dental cleanings for good health. Daily teeth brushing and other home dental care are vital for your pets' oral health.

For questions or to schedule a professional dental cleaning for your pet call:

303-661-0702

(space is limited)

Louisville Family
Animal Hospital
Caring For Your Pets From Birth Through Life!

